HIS RESIGNATION ACCEPTED. Rev. W. F. Taylor Will Leave First

Baptist Church in May.

The members of the First Baptist Church held their regular quarterly meeting last evening, and in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. F. Taylor, Joseph Sutton acted as chairman. About one-half an hour was occupied in reading the quarterly report, at the conclusion of which A. Wagner, clerk of the church, read a communication from Rev. W. F. Taylor tendering his resignation, to take effect the third Sunday in May, when he will have been pastor of the church for five years. Samuel Hanna moved that the resignation be accepted, and this was seconded by Dr. Greenville Woolen. The resignation was accepted, only a small number voting not to accept it. Then the meeting adjourned.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Taylor spoke very kindly of the Rev. Henry Day, who for many years was pastor of this church, and from whom Mr. Taylor had, during his five years' stay in the city, received valuable advice. On leaving this church Mr. Taylor at once goes to Scattle, Wash., to take the pastorate of a prom-

Permission Given to Cut Into Another Improved Street-Georgia-Street Sewer Completed.

The building inspector has recommended the condemnation of the row of rickety one-story frame buildings on Washington street opposite the Capitol, between the World's Fair building and the Everitt Seed Company's building. The building inspector says the buildings cause an increase of danger to the adjoining property, and are a constant menace to it. In the rear of them are old frame stables. The buildings have long been an eyesore, and it has been a matter of wonderment that they did not collapse. The Works Board is of the opinion that the buildings should be torn down, and it is probable that the building inspector will be authorized to order their removal. The board anticipates a strong fight against this order, as there are a num-ber of property owners and tenants inter-

One Student Withdrew. The examination of students who are applicants for positions in the City Hospital and City Dispensary was continued in the Council chamber yesterday. In the morning the examinations were conducted by Dr. Ray, from the Central Hospital for the Insane, on surgery. The afternoon examination was conducted by Dr. Jeff.ies on ated by the withdrawal of one of the students from the examination. It was Dr. Rills Eastman, a graduate of the Central College of Physicians and Surgeons. When the hour for closing arrived and the papers were called for Dr. Eastman was not ready to hand his in, and asked for more time. This was refused him, and he declined to hand in his paper. He then withdrew from the examination. Dr. Eastman shows that the rules did not specify any hour for closing the examination, and that on this account he did not hasten in his

To Cut the Pavement.

The Connecticut Mutual Insurance Commission was given permission to cut into the College-avenue pavement to make connection with water mains, A letter was received from the company that put down the pavement consenting to the permission being granted. Thomas H. Spann, representing the insurance company, was called before the board, and explained that as it was necessary to make an opening across the entire street it would be difficult, if not impossible, to tunnel under th pavement. He thought the reluctance of the board to grant permission to cut improved streets was commendable, but said would have to make some exceptions, and he saw no other way of doing the work in this case. The granting of such permission will not be common in the future.

FOUND DEAD AGAINST A STOVE.

Oliver P. Gray, a Negro, Dies in a Horrible Manner.

Oliver P. Gray, colored, aged fifty years, a barber employed at No. 123 Fort Wayne avenue, was found dead yesterday morning. When found Gray was leaning against the side of a hot gas stove. The entire left side of his head and face were burned to a crisp. His left shoulder and arm were also badly burned. His right leg, which had been in contact with the front part of the stove, was severely burned. Gray had been employed at the barber shop, of which John W. Bridges is the proprietor, for about two weeks. On asking for work, Gray told Bridges that he had no place to sleep, and Bridges allowed him to sleep on a lounge in the barber shop. Thursday night Gray, Bridges and several friends played checkers in the shop until a late hour. Those who he was in an ugly mood. However, the time passed off quietly and the men departed about 10 o'clock, leaving Gray to sleep in the shop, as usual.

Bridges frequently does odd jogs in paperhanging, and yesterday morning sent his helper, Henry Sims, to the shop to get his kit of tools. Sims, on arriving at the store, found the doors locked, and attempted to arouse Gray, but was unsuccessful. Sims then summoned James Feeney and Charles Lane, who reside close by, and the three broke in the door, after attempting to unlock it with keys. On going into the shop they found Gray leaning against the stove Further investigation revealed great spots of blood on the floor and lounge. This at once caused the men to believe that Gray had been assaulted and knocked unconscious during the night. Coroner Beck was notified. The body was removed to a morgue, where an autopsy was held about 4 o'clock in the afternoon by Dr. William Wright. Dr. Wright removed the skull cap and found blood collected between the skin and He examined the brain and found that it was in such a softened condition, as the result of the intense heat, that was impossible to locate any clots of blood which would have collected in case of a severe blow on the head. There were no ractures of the skull, and this fact led the Doctor to believe that Gray was attacked by apoplexy and had fallen over unconscious on to the stove. The bruises on Gray's face were undoubtedly caused by the fall. Dr. Wright stated that the blood on the floor was accounted for by the fact that the in-tense heat caused the blood to flow from Gray's mouth and nose. Dr. Wright care-fully searched the body for bruises, but could not find any. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Gray, who is lying on West Ohio street, and who has been separated from her husband for several years, called at the morgue and stated that she would take charge of the body. She stated that Gray had been a hard drinker for years, and for this reason she and her husband separated.

CITY SCHOOL OFFICIALS.

Commissioners Will Make No Changes-Text Book Recommendations.

At the next meeting of the Board of School Commissioners the election of superintendent for the city schools will be held. Superintendent Jones will be elected to succeed himself, as the board is entirely satisfied with the work during his incumbency. There are no others appearing upon the field for the position, and the election will merely be a formal selection of Mr. Jones to continue in the office for another year. At this meeting the librarian and superintendent of buildings and grounds will also be elected. There is not likely to be any change in either of these offices. Miss Browning, the present librarian, will un oubtedly be re-elected, and the probabilities are that O'Meara, the present super-intendent of buildings and grounds, will have another year's term of office. The text-book question will also be before the board. The committee on text books will make its report on that night, and will probably recommend some changes in the books, particularly the music books.

A SAD CASE OF "SHOOING."

Jane Dailey's Chickens Bring About Complications in "Canada."

Jane Dailey, colored, residing in "Canada," that part of the city in the vicinity of Eighth street and the canal, was arrested last night, charged with assault and battery, on warrant sworn out by James Lilly, a neighbor. The difficulty arose over some chickens. On Tuesday, March 20, Mrs. Dailey attempted to "shoo" her chickens, which were strolling in the neighboring commons, into her yard. Some of the more exasperating ones fled into Lilly's yard. Mrs. Dailey attempted to knock a chicken out of a hole in the fence, but the chicken dodged and Lilly received the blow. "Den," stated Mrs. Dailey, "dat man Lilly, when he got de lick dat was almed fo' de chicken, flew all to pieces and swiped at me wif his fist and slammed me right aginst de fence. Attorney Ross Hawkins returned from the East yesterday, where he has been looking after Iron Hall litigation. New Jersey has $70,000, which is also being contested, but Mr. Hawkins was informed by the court at Trenton that the funds would undoubtedly be sent to Indiana. It is believed that if the Pennsylvania suit terminates favorably there will be no further trouble in securing the funds all over the country for general

Changes the Spots on Cards. A handsome man of small stature dropped into the Journal office last night and announced himself as Professor Malini, the twenty-one years old, but before he was through with his informal entertainment there were people ready to believe he was a sage with occult powers. He has a trick that excels those of Hermann and Kellar. Five people think of certain cards, and he straightway proceeds to spread out those cards before them. He holds a card high in his hand and makes it change its spots in a marvelous manner. He is at the Grand Hotel for two weeks, and makes engagements for entertaining at parties.

NEW LINE OF ATTACK

Two Men Arrested for Making Bets in the Tron Pool Room.

Superintendent Powell Will Break Up the Dive by Arresting Those Who Play the Races.

Superintendent of Police Powell has taken a tack to close the pool room that has been allowed to flourish in this city without interference on the part of the Criminal Court. For the last few days he has had detectives watching the place and posting themselves on the manner of gambling, and yesterday detectives Doherty and McGuff made two arrests as a result of their observations. Jesse Carlisle and Henry Arnold were arrested on a charge of gambling. They were "playing the races" at Tron's pool room on North Illinois street.

Tron was allowed to run his pool room during the entire Sullivan administration, for whose perpetuity in office he contributed a large sum. The Criminal Court did not care to disturb the Democratic boss. After the Journal began to call attention constantly to the evils of this place, Prosecutor Holtzman finally submitted an indictment against one of the proprietors, one of the employes volunteering to give evidence. The Criminal Court then could do but little else than take cognizance of the notorious violation of the law. Douglass was indicted, but has not been tried. Superintendent Powell did not like this idea of indicting a man and then allowing the room to continue in its open violation. He was advised that people who play the races at the pool room can be prosecuted for gambling, and he proposes to break up the place on this line. The betting he believes comes under the head of gambling, and he intends to make arrests every day. He was asked last night if, in case the men arrested yesterday were fined in the Police Court and they then took an appeal, whether he would allow the matter to drop.

continue to make arrests of all people found gambling in this pool room. I believe it is gambling, pure and simple, and if people go there now after these arrests they will do so at their own risk. We have been investigating the modus operandi of the place, two of the detectives having been stationed there for several days past. A description of Tron's place and the evils of it have been frequently given in the boys could be found about the room betting on the fake races at the winter tracks.

TURNED ON HIS FATHER.

Frank Manney, a Tough Youth, Tries to Cut His Parent.

Frank Manney, aged eighteen years, residing at the corner of New Jersey and Bicking streets, was arrested last night by patrolman Shafer on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. Manney, after drinking all day, went home about 6 o'clock in an intoxicated condition. His father censured him, and Manney, who is very quick tempered, replied that it concerned no one but himself. His father then attempted to reprimand him. Manney resisted and drew a pocketknife, with which he attempted to cut his father. The son then ran from the house into the street, all the while calling his father vile names. Afterwards becoming very much exasperated, he picked up a number of bricks and threw them through the windows. This he continued to do until the arrival of patrolman Shafer. Shafer went into the house and found the furniture in a demoralized condition. The mirrors and dishes which were on a table in the kitchen were broken by the bricks. The outside of the house also presented a storm-beaten appearance. The glass in the windows and doors were broken. At the police station Manney stated that his father was in the habit of mistreating him. His story is not believed. Manney is a tough character for one so youthful. Last win-ter he severely stabbed a companion while in a friendly scuffle.

Indianapolis Shooters Defeated in the Last Match of the Series.

There was an interesting shooting match yesterday afternoon at the grounds of the Indianapolis Club, north of Fall creek. The contest was between the Limited Gun Club, of this city, and the Southport Gun Club. It was the last of a series of three matches, and it was won by the Southport shooters, which makes the score stand: Southport, 2; Indianapolis, 1. Last year the contests were won by club. HE RAISED THE BILLS.

Queer Procedure Before Cornty Commissioners in Dr. Young Case.

Attorneys Van Voris and Spencer, representing Dr. T. J. Young, yesterday filed three bills with the County Commissioners for $50 each. All three were approved by the coroner. Recently Dr. Young filed the bills for $25 each, but the County Commissioners refused to allow them. The amounts were due the physician, it is alleged, for post mortem work which he had performed. On the refusal of the commissioners to pay the bills, they were raised $25 each and refiled. The commissioners are unable to understand just why the coroner should approve both sets of bills and will contest the accounts. The coroner states that he understood Dr. Young would be compelled to bring suit for his money, and he thought he should have twice the amount of the original claim.
